Q17 - Provide any comments you have on what you learned about valuing yourself and working ethically with others in a diverse population.

I cannot say that I particularly value myself. However, this is not Western's fault. However, my time at Western has helped me work with a wide variety of different people with different life experiences and beliefs.

The population was not very diverse, but the focus was always on working ethically.

We had multiple group projects which made us work with other students. Those projects were very important. It is not enough that students sit down by themselves and do work. They must learn how to work with others they don't necessarily like.

The introduction assignment required every student to find two other students who had things in common. This assignment forced everyone to read most of the introductions on Blackboard. We learned that everyone had a different background and was so special in his or her own way.

A business ethics course may be more helpful than general ethics.

Absolutely, every situation is different, and everyone has their own background story. We live in an area where there is a lot of diversity and I think that is helpful.

It was very rewarding to hear and learn to value the opinions and ideas of every person in my classes.

This kind of goes with the social theories I believe. This is a great skill to learn, especially working in communities that are as diverse as ours is. I think it's a great idea to have a diverse working environments because you are able to communicate and work with others that have different views as you. This allows for different approaches to problem solving, critical thinking, and even just learning about other cultures, that you could some day use to help another person that may be in that situation.

I have always had a strong work ethic and have worked in diverse populations, so this was more of a refresher.

I have learned to value others opinions and inputs

This program taught me to work well with others even if I didn't get along with them.

At the work place, there are many different personalities to deal with.

Very interesting to hear past stories of interns. I have learned that I have a really good work ethic, and that is very appreciated at Accelerated. Also a fairly diverse group of people, and have learned to get along with everyone.

Great

Moving from Chicago, it was good to see how big of difference it is in people and personalities around here... it was good to get into the program and see that first hand.

In the workplace you are going to have to work with all kinds of different people and they are not different than anyone else.

Was able to work as a team player during my internship and clinical hours

Knowing how to speak to certain people

I work in Hospital and that is one place where you can see a lot of diversity an my class has helped me to deal with diversity.

I learned a lot about working with others and I feel more comfortable doing it.

I grew up in a small (-minded) town that had just a little bit of diversity to it. Lacrosse is the perfect city to socialize in and work with people of many different backgrounds, along with being a great place in which to build an effective network.

It just makes things better for you and the people around you. It does not go unnoticed with superiors and peers.

This is something that has personally helped me a great deal. We discussed ethics in many of our courses and it has given me a greater understanding in working with people of diversity. I have also learned to value myself, just by doing the best I could throughout the two years and having my instructors see that and give praise.

I now have more confidence in my own self.

Yes, we did a lot of project, looking at working with diverse population and how to treat them in a dental office.

This program is not made to teach children how to act like men. Its a school tech program.

already had those qualities

I learned that everyone has different obligations and that it isn't always easy to coordinate schedules. I've learned that everyone is important and has their own obligations to take care of, in addition to school.

I learned how to work with others through projects, time management, and equally splitting up the work.

Many group projects have helped me work better with others, and manage my time better.

There was minimal diversity within the program

Not possible without Xxxxx

I learned how to work with others of all types and with customers.

I learned to get more with others.

You don't have to like everyone, you just got to work with them to complete your goal.

Everyone was unique in their own way, and I appreciated learning how to work with them and felt a friendship in some way with almost every classmate.

We never really branched out from the 28 people in our class.

Population not very diverse.

My program includes a lot of communication and group projects. Respecting others is a big part of critiquing work in a positive and productive way.

Learned to make sure to give credit to those who require or deserve it

I was surrounded by diverse groups when I was in the military and I have always gotten along with people of other cultures and faiths.

We discussed many different aspects of diversity among the workforce.

I was able to work ethically in a diverse population before this program.

Diversity class is really helpful

I learned a lot about myself throughout this program

I choose Human Resources to work with people and help people to be the best they can be in their job or place them into a job that they love. During this program I really learned a lot about valuing employees, management as well as yourself.

College is definitely different than High school. I was away from my family so I had to rely on myself to wake up each and every morning and make it to class on time. College has brought out the best of what I am capable of and even though I brought a strong work ethic to college with me, the college experience has only strengthened it.

multicultural classroom

Group work was a major aspect of this program. Had to be able to work well with others in order to move projects forward.

We had a little bit about ethics.

I absolutely loved my Ethics and Psychology classes - They really assisted me in further opening my mind.

I already had these skills

"With great power comes great responsibility..." This sums it up pretty well. In IT, you are exposed to potentially very personal documents which may be financial, social, or emotional assets to the end user. As an IT professional, I have learned how these powers can be taken advantage of, and adversely how vulnerable I may be to outside viewers. It is with these bits of information that I pride myself on the responsibilities I may carry at a given point. In my current job, I have keylogging abilities to every end user and computer on our network, which I could use maliciously. But I do not, for it is utterly and completely wrong, not to mention illegal too.

We discuss ethics in marketing. We have diversity in the students in our program.

Everywhere you work, you're going to work in a diverse population. Especially working in the healthcare field, there is a wide variety of all different diverse population. I've learned that not everyone works the same, and that everyone does their work differently. However, it is just best to learn it a different way each time that way you have a better feel for what you're more comfortable with. I also learned to not let my depression and anxiety take over my career, I'm not going to let it affect my future.

With being in a smaller program with nice small class sizes and seen faces everyday, we valued each other and picked each other up during hard times which really taught myself that I am worth it and valued and so is everyone else on this team.

I have learned that all different people come from different places in life, and that everyone can contribute in their own way.

Working with patients and other employees are a big part in the health field and we have to value and understand diverse populations.

Always have not as a result of this program.

I always appreciated honest feedback upon my performance. Hearing someone else say positive things about me means far more than any test score or how I may feel.

Coming from a diverse background it was not a big challenge to work with diverse population

I think there was some opportunity to work with diverse groups I think there is room for diversity in this program

I have caught myself saying before how I am just a CNA and oh I'll just be a nurse, but there is a lot of value and responsibility in both of those roles so it is important to remember. Caring for people is a privilege and seeing different populations and some lifestyle choices you might not agree with can be tough but it is important to remain professional

With the diverse experiences we are given in clinical this is taught very well!

I have had the opportunity to work with many diverse people within this program. Taking care of patients who have been "out of my comfort zone" has been very beneficial to me, as I know more about what to expect and what to look for specifically.

I feel confident in my ability to work with patients of all different backgrounds and diagnoses.

Everyone is different, learn to work with them and keep the customer happy.

I learned how important it is to be ethical in not only a work place but any social environment, it is just a courtesy to others, to be respected, which is what I have learned about myself too, how to be respected.

I've definitely grown into my career and realized just how important a solid work ethic is.

They taught me to be more confident with everything

I worked with many different types of people in the beginning of this program I wasn't sure if it was the one for me, but after all of the support and encouragement along the way I realized that I am a good PTA and am proud of what I have accomplished

I have learning how I can do is job and how it changes patients lives. As a result I have more confidence in myself

I've always been able to work ethically with others, but throughout this program I have found my self value and learned how to be confident in my work and what I do.

Having preceptors tell me what I need to work on has helped me learn to be a better student therapist

Not everyone is your personality type, but I've learned that it important to treat all people with respect.

I was already doing this.

Agree

I've become a lot more confident in my own abilities and working with my classmates goes smoothly.
